

Host of over 80 public meetings, Adler continues to talk directly with local families and small business owners

Beverly, NJ - Congressman John Adler today announced a series of "Congress on Your Corner" diner visits to hear from local residents and business owners about healthcare reform, strengthening small businesses, reviving our economy, protecting benefits for our seniors and veterans and putting Americans back to work. Congressman Adler, who has hosted more than 80 town hall-style meetings to date, continues to reach out and listen to families in his district so he can bring their ideas to Washington.

"I look forward to continuing my conversations with South Jersey and Shore area families, senior citizens, local veterans and small business owners," Congressman Adler said. "Like most local residents, I'm fed up with the way Washington works. We need commonsense, bipartisan solutions to spark our economy, grow small business and reduce our deficit."

Congressman Adler plans to stop in diners across the district to continue his conversation with constituents. Today, Congressman Adler announced five stops in the three counties that encompass his district. He has held previous "Congress on Your Corner" events at 13 diners in 13 towns during the past year.
